UNITING LIVES TO MAKE A DIFFERENCE

Tracy Boone and her 6-year-old son lost her husband and his father in 2012 to a brain disease that left them both full of grief and trauma as the undiagnosed disease had ravaged their home. She remembers sitting at her dining room table never feeling so alone and not sure where to turn next. She says she could be in a room full of people and feel completely displaced because of the war going on inside of her heart from what they had suffered. She has vowed to do whatever she can do to bring community, tools and whatever else her faith shows her will help.

One of the avenues that she used to help on their journey back to life has been horses. The hospice therapist handed Tracy a stack of brochures and that is what began her journey. As she flipped through that stack she found herself stopping on the one with a picture of a man with a horse. She and Elijah have a love for horses and the outdoors so she knew it was a place to start, and they needed the help. Most importantly, Tracy pushed into her faith as it is the cornerstone of who she is and what she does.

WHAT YOU WILL LEARN FROM TRACY

- How does grief and trauma effect children and families?
- What is the biggest need a grieving family has?
- When tragedy strikes, what are some resources families have access to?
- What is the best way a community can come alongside to help what your foundation is doing?
- If we know someone who is grieving, or we want to volunteer, where do grieving families go from here?

Tracy has authored two books, "I Can Finish Well" and a children's book "Elijah's Hope, Who Am I?." and she holds a PhD in Christian Counseling. In 2015, Tracy started a foundation called "Elijah's Path to Healing Foundation" to serve families and individuals who have lost loved ones. She and her son Elijah co-produce a global television show called the Path to Healing Show. They have partnered with Rev. Bobby Layne to take the show on the road across the country on a Nationwide Tour called "Healing Has Come Across America 2021". Their mission is to meet families face to face, develop lasting community, and elevate hope that Healing Has Come.

She has been featured on 9News, WFEN Radio and several podcasts. Most notably, The Path to Healing Show has now expanded to three networks touching lives all over the world every week, with new shows bringing hope and encouragement. They can be seen on Preach The Word Worldwide Television Network, where they received a grant, The Now Network and ZondraTV and they have now exceeded over 78 episodes. They use horses for Equine Assisted Learning as a healing tool for anyone experiencing loss. Elijah's job as co-host is to interview incredible guests collecting insight and understanding for his segment, Words of Wisdom for My Generation. This is featured separately on ZondraTV for kids and youth. Tracy and Elijah joined forces with Rev. Bobby Layne of Bobby Layne Ministries, who is now the spokesperson and part of the cast and team. They are linking up with other ministries and coming alongside the millions of children, widows and families who have lost loved ones to let them know, "They Are Not Alone!"
